Indian songs dance video

Your first dance as a couple is full of expectations. After all, it's your wedding day, so you'll already be overwhelmed with emotion. Needless to say, that a few minutes, all eyes are on you. Choosing a wedding song with a special meaning will calm your nerves, so you can focus on moving those dance moves correctly. First, you'll want to decide the speed or uptempo of your first dance song. Most people choose something relatively slow with 4/4 beats because it's easiest to dance. Put on some random songs, dance in your living room and see what feels right. Now let's think about what music is particularly meaningful about. Was there music playing the first time you kissed or got engaged? Do you have lyrics that make one person think about the other immediately? Is there always a passage of music that makes your mind swell? If your parents are happily married, you might want to dance to the same music they did. After asking these questions, if you still don't have that perfect choice, don't worry: many of the couples don't have their own songs until they choose their first dance song. Instead, think about how you describe your love and ask for lyrics and music that match that description. It may take a little while to find the perfect first dance song, but the good news is that you can have a lot of fun doing so. You can also talk to the vendor. Your wedding band or DJ probably has suggestions for you in their repertoire. Check the lyrics. Some popular first dance song choices are actually about heartache or the loss of a loved one. Some couples prefer to have their friends and family pin notes in the bride's gown or simply let them slip one or two, but having a traditional dollar dance is a way to make it a little more fun. There are two ways to approach choosing the perfect song for your dollar dance. If you want to go with something cheeky, try Madonna's Material Girl or Kanye West's Gold Digger. If you want to keep something sentimental, choose a song by James Taylor, the Beatles, or Billy Joel. Earlier, we've picked out the 55 best dollar dance songs to play at your wedding.
